

2020 Neighborhood Programming Application

Background:

Each summer, LAND studio provides free programming to youth and families in Cleveland's neighborhood parks and public spaces. This annual initiative provides an opportunity for residents to engage in their communities as they participate in ranging art and entertainment activities like theater production, outdoor movies, ice cream socials, and more. The presentation of enriching community events enhances social ties among individuals, families, and neighborhoods.

LAND studio works directly with residents, community organizations, and stakeholders to develop programming that they want to see in their communities. Programs have included art instruction, community festivals, wellness programs, and more. It is essential that programming is accessible, welcoming, relevant, and meaningful to residents. Over time, activities evolve and expand in each neighborhood to reflect the values of the people that participate.

What this funding supports:

Direct costs associated with program implementation that include professional art instruction, performance and service fees, refreshments, equipment and production costs, portable restrooms, etc.
